People and animals were put on this planet with one main goal: to procreate and keep our species going for another generation.

It's in the DNA of every living creature to find one or more mates in which to share DNA with and create as many healthy offspring as possible. Everything else we do as a species is just minor details by comparison.

So if our main goal is to create as many healthy babies as possible, why can it be so difficult for so many men to find a woman to go home with?

Heck, why is it so difficult sometimes to merely approach a woman and start a conversation?

A lot of this is due to rules that society has imposed on us, and a lot of this is also due to her body's internal defense mechanisms. Men are able to reproduce with almost unlimited amounts of women in their lifetime and create countless babies.

However, women have are the complete opposite. They're only capable of carrying a baby for a set number of years of their lives. And during the nine months that they are pregnant as well as several months after they have given birth, it is impossible for them to begin carrying a second baby. So they have had to devise a way to make sure they were only going to carry the babies of the men deemed best suited for them.

To some women, this may mean the biggest and strongest since they have a sense of safety and protection. To other women, it may be men with a lot of wealth since they and their children will always be taken care of. To other women they may decide the most important trait is loyalty, in order to ensure that the father will never abandon them or the child.

Thankfully, today we have means of having sex with one another that will not always result in pregnancy. Condoms, birth control pills, etc. all allow women to have sex with multiple guys without ever conceiving a baby if they don't want one.

As a result, women are incredibly open about sharing their bodies, and enjoying sex with multiple men throughout their lifetimes.

But before a woman is willing to have sex with you, you must demonstrate to her that you're the kind of guy worth having sex with.

And in order to do this, you first must approach her and demonstrate certain values that she will find sexually attractive.

In Sexual Mind Reader, we discussed a number of physical traits to look for that were telltale signs of whether or not a woman is likely to go home with you early on and how enjoyable the sex will be.

In this eBook, we're going to take the very next step and go over a number of tips, techniques, and strategies to begin a conversation with a woman in a way that will have her sexually attracted to you in a very short period of time.

And finally, in the last eBook, The Power Of Touch, you're going to discover how to use simple and innocent touches to make her crave the feeling of you and practically drag you back to the bedroom.

So if you're ready to understand exactly what will and will not work when approaching a woman and why, let's get started.

Openers That Won't Work

As a woman, I can tell you that I get approached and hit on by guys all the time. In fact, I don't even think I can count how many times guys will approach me in any given week.

And I'm not alone in this. In fact, just about all women deal with the same thing. Now when you catch us in a bad mood or we don't have time to talk, sure we may be a little bit rude, but then again so is everybody from time to time. Most of the time however, women will be incredibly polite.

The fact is, we know that you're hitting on us. That's obvious right away. And we know that it takes a set of balls to go and even approach a woman. I mean, how often do you see women approaching men?

Some women don't approach men because they feel that it's the man's job to approach them, but more times than not we're just too nervous to approach you because we don't want to come off looking dumb. So when you approach us, we empathize and we understand just how scary that can be.

So whether we're actually interested in you or not, 99% of the time so long as you're not offensive, rude, or cross any lines, we're going to be very polite to you.

If we're not interested in you, we will let you know by very early on stating that we have a boyfriend/husband or that we have somewhere to be or some other subtle excuse to let you know that we appreciate you taking the time to talk to us hopefully without making you feel bad.

And when a woman is interested in you, hopefully she will make your job much easier. Sadly however, a lot of women may only respond to your questions with one word answers, not laugh at your jokes, or seem disinterested. This is not always a sign that they're not into you. It may just be a signal that they don't want to come off as easy and would prefer to make you work for their affection.

However there are certain things guys say and do when they approach us that will be instant deal breakers. It doesn't matter if you look like David Beckham, if you approach us in one of the following ways you can bet we're going to blow you off really quickly.

Number one. You say something rude or obnoxious to us. I can't count the amount of times I would be walking down the street minding my own business, and I'd hear some jackass come up and say something like:

"You should be smiling. You're so pretty, I want to see you smile."

Don't tell me how I should act, look, or what I should do. If you want my attention, you're going to need to earn it by giving me something of value. Your stupid suggestion for telling me to smile is only going to infuriate me, and by the way this goes for all women.

If I'm smiling, it's for a reason; it's because I'm genuinely happy about something, and not because some stranger told me to.

Another way to kill your chances is to start your first sentence with a woman with the words, "Hey sweetie/babe/beautiful/gorgeous/honey/cutie/sexy" or any other "cute" little pet name you want to give us.

Those kinds of nicknames are reserved for people that earn them, not some random guy who thinks he's being clever. At the same time, don't ever call us "ma'am". That will make us feel old and anything but sexy.

Next, if you want to come approach us while we're out with our friends, you better acknowledge our friends and be respectful to them. I may be out with my sister or one of the closest people in the world to me, and if you (a total stranger) are rude to them why in the hell would I waste my time with you?

However, if I am out with friends and you are able to win them over by being polite, charming, and inclusive, you're going to inevitably win me over too. Because if my friends don't like you, there's a real good chance that I'm not going to like you. But if you can win my friends over, you better believe they're going to be pushing me towards you, telling me to give you my number, go out with you, or even go home with you.

The third mistake a lot of guys tend to make when approaching a woman is by starting off with an insult. The belief is that if you put us on a pedestal, we're not going to be interested in you. However, if you say something negative that almost compels us to "work for your approval", we're going to be more likely to think of you as a prize when we eventually catch you.

In reality however, this couldn't be further from the truth.

If we don't know you, we don't care about you. You haven't done anything to make my day better at this point, so I have no reason to want to give you another minute of my time.

So if you start off the interaction by saying something jerk-y like, "I think you would look better with longer hair", all you're really doing is irritating me and making me want to get further away from you.

So if you've ever approached a girl with any of the methods we've just gone over, do yourself a favor, stop it, and never do it again.

So now with that out of the way, we can begin to discuss ways that you can approach a woman that will win her over.

The Inclusive Conversation Opener

When it comes to dating, most women absolutely dread going on a first date with a new guy. That's one reason why you'll hear about a woman continuing to date a guy she's not really into, because it's simply better than the job interview style questions we're inevitably asked on every lame first date.

However, if you can start to speak to us in a way that makes us feel like we're old friends and we're in the middle of a conversation, that's going to break the ice and make us a lot more comfortable and relaxed around you right away.

For instance, I was at the coffee shop recently and when I turned around the guy behind me said, "do you ever wonder why the Starbucks employees spell your name wrong?"

Right away without any effort, we were able to get into a conversation without any of the awkwardness that tends to come when you're speaking to a new person for the first time. We ended up sitting together and having coffee for about twenty minutes.

Another time I went to visit a friend in Austin, Texas, and while I was out wandering aimlessly waiting for my friend, a guy approached me and asked if I knew any good bars in the neighborhood.

I told him that I didn't since that was my first time there, and he smiled and said, "Lucky for you, I know them all. Come on, I'll bring you to some of my favorites."

And just like that we were in the middle of a date on a warm Sunday afternoon.

Finally, this other time I went to this bar that plays a lot of live music. And when one of the rock bands finished their set, this guy came up to me and said, "That music was great. It reminded me of my grunge phase back in high school."

Right away, we were able to start talking about our favorite music from back in the day. And when he asked if I wanted to step up to the bar and grab a drink, of course I said yes.

If you have an opportunity to approach a girl and speak to a girl as if you're in the middle of an existing conversation, do it. It's always going to be the easiest way to go.

The Cold Opener

As great as it is to begin talking to a woman as if you're in the middle of a conversation, you're not always going to have that opportunity. A lot of the time, there won't be any possible conversation threads for you to hook on to, so you're going to have no choice but to go in completely cold.

This is usually the one that guys are the most nervous about since they really don't know what to say or how to keep the conversation moving.

A lot of times, guys will try silly pickup lines that never work or they begin a conversation and find that it's filled with tons of awkward pauses and silences.

Instead, try saying something like this. Try walking up to a woman and saying hello. Then tell her that you noticed her from across the room and that there was just something about her that practically forced you to want to know more.

Maybe it was her energy or how much fun she appeared to be having or some intangible thing that you can't quite put your finger on, but you knew you would regret it if you didn't introduce yourself.

Women are very big into things like the zodiac, astrology, fate, destiny, and the stars aligning. So when you tell us that there was some outside element that made you feel so compelled to want to talk to us, it's going to immediately make us think that the stars are working for us in some way.

This is the point where a lot of guys may fall victim to the dreaded awkward silence. So it's very important to have some sort of game plan in mind as to where to steer the conversation.

Maybe she's wearing a very unique article of clothing, or you're in an environment where something interesting is going on such as a sports bar. Asking her about where she grew up, what she does for fun, or even worse what she does for work, is going to take your momentum and completely derail it.

The Opinion Question

Next, we're going to discuss Opinion Question openers.

These will probably be your best friend for a little while as they are stupidly simple to start a conversation with a girl.

Basically, you're just going to ask the girl her opinion on something. It can be anything at all, so long as you're not too over-presumptuous at first. For instance, let's pretend you're out with a friend and you see a girl that you're interested in. You can approach her and say something such as,

"Excuse me. My friend and I were having a debate, and I wanted to get your opinion on something."

The question you ask her is almost irrelevant. You could ask her opinion on which one of you is wearing the nicer shirt, or which of two movies is better, or if a certain gift would be good for your little nieces birthday. It really doesn't matter since this is just a way to get the ball rolling.

If she's very short and gives you one or two word answers, that's a good indication that she's not interested. At that point you say thank you very much for your time, and you carry on about your day.

However, if she replies with a well thought out answer and keeps the conversation going a little bit, this almost guarantees that she's attracted to you. So all you have to do now is keep it going.

Very Direct Openers

Direct opening lines are very high risk, high reward. The idea is that you approach a woman and you very directly state your sexual intentions.

If you followed along with Sexual Mind Reader and picked out a woman who you believe is very hyper sexual, you can try being quite a bit direct with her.

If you've ever heard stories of two people meeting for the first time and having sex within a couple of minutes, whether it be back at one of their apartments or possibly the bathroom stall of the bar, it's almost guaranteed that the guy used a Direct Opener.

In order to pull this off, you will need to maintain very strong eye contact and body language so that she knows that you're serious and mean business. These are usually best tried at places like a bar where she may have had a couple of drinks already and will be more open to the thought of a Direct Opener.

Try approaching her leaning in and gently saying into her ear something such as,

"You're just too fucking sexy for me to take my eyes off of. I have to come and talk to you."

Or:

"You look so incredible in that skin-tight dress, I just can't stop imagining peeling it off of you."

I have to warn you that these will not work on every girl, no matter how good you are at pulling them off. And there's a high likelihood that you will get rejected more times than not.

However, there will always be a number of women that this will work on so you're going to want to keep a condom with you at all times.

Putting It All Together

We just went over a number of different ways to approach any woman and get a conversation going in a sexy and attractive way. This is no doubt going to help you to bring home more girls excited to get into bed with you more often. And when you follow along with the information you learned in Sexual Mind Reader, you'll know that you're only approaching girls who are very sexually open, active, and wild. So you won't be wasting your time with girls who are boring in bed.

But there's one crucial factor you need to be aware of:

If You Can't Satisfy Her In Bed, Don't Expect Her To Ever Come Back For More

Women have a lot more sexual options than most men do. If she's attractive and very sexual by nature, you can bet she has tons of guys who would kill to get her in bed.

So why would she ever want to be with a guy who couldn't satisfy her?

If you're looking for her to come over more often, become a regular sex buddy, or even turn this into a potential long-term relationship, you're going to need to know how to take care of every one of her needs in bed.

Otherwise, you can kiss your chances of her coming back goodbye.
